

CLUE 4 ANSWERS

- ✘ The bowls, with remnants of the desert (dessert) from last knight's (night's) meal, had been left there by the guests. Freda poured some cereal - found in the higher of the two cupboards – and looked out of the window. A tall fir tree cast a shadow over the beds of mint, rosemary and thyme. The postman sauntered up to deliver the mail as a large lorry turned left onto the main road. Peace was restored as the lorry departed and the pale sunlight revealed a squirrel's twitching tail on the bird-table.
- ✘ Carrying the kitchen waste up the garden, she saw a queue forming down the road. It was plain to see that the driver of a Fiat had not read the One Way sign. She watched the scene with interest as a large motorbike arrived with a raw roar, the driver impatient with the weight. He fought his way through, the muscles on his arms bulging, as rain began to fall. Eight minutes later the police arrived and fined the Fiat driver.
- ✘ "I know I'm not allowed that way but you shouldn't profit from my mistake," complained the driver.
- ✘ Hearing a message on the radio, the policewoman replied, "We have to shoot off now, I hope this has taught you a lesson."
- ✘ Freda went indoors and climbed the stairs. The storey was fresh in her mind as she began to write her diary. The rays of the evening sun lit the room.

The criminal is under the age of thirty.
